

In love: Rockdale councillor Gary Green and bride Joujou Jabbour, who wore a Steven Kahalil modern drop-waisted silhouette gown with full-circle skirt and train with hand-beaded in Swarovski crystals.

Led to wed by fate

AFTER completing a masters in counselling and producing a kit called Attracting People Magnetically to help people combat a fear of rejection, Rockdale councillor Gary Green has conquered love himself.

The black belt taekwondo master married fiancée Joujou Jabbour at St Fiacre's Catholic Church in Leichhardt last week.

The reception was held at Doltone House, Sylvania Waters.

Cr Green said he was instantly attracted to Joujou ("JJ") because of her "long piano fingers".

"The first thing I said to her was 'you have beautiful marrying fingers,'" Cr Green said.

"What a pick-up line.

"It's a wonder I'm not still single.

"But it broke the ice long enough for it to emerge that JJ and I knew the same priest.

"There were many other coincidences. She worked as the marketing manager for a large book publishing company (hence our unique Gibran's Little Book of Love bombonieres) and I write books.

"Her brother worked with a good friend and we both did readings in church and went to the same gym.

"Five minutes into our first date I knew I could hand this young lady the keys to my life. She was 'the one'."

The couple are honeymooning in the US and Tahiti.
