

All that monkey business

I write to shed some light on your question "Where are the monkeys?" (Your View, January 23).

I can tell you there may be a couple on Rockdale Council and many of their great-ape supporters regularly visit council meetings to heckle the non-orangutan councillors.

They often protest when there's a whiff of change in the air, monkey with the truth and resist good ideas like growers markets, flower beds, lifesaving hospital donations, Christmas lights, ideas that remove hoons, the clean up of shopping trolleys or the removal of dangerous trees.

They prefer monkey bars to modern/safe playground equipment and are usually so far left that they're left right out of the decision-making process.

I feel sorry for the educated councillors as it must be like having a monkey on your back, but then monkey see, monkey do, I guess. Well, I better stop monkeying about and get back to work.
