Regarding the article, "Concerns ignored" (Leader, June 29).

It is claimed Cr Gary Green referred to residents objecting to the recent Mimosa Street proposal as "serial objectors". Cr Green's objection was to people he found continually on petitions that were against any development, whether it is Bexley or Brighton-Le-Sands.

He was not pointing his finger at the residents at Mimosa Street, but rather had concerns about any person who seems to be a "professional objector".

Plus, your newspaper stated the residents of Mimosa Street hadn't received any reply to their concerns from the council and councillors.

Residents were notified on three separate occasions about the application or its amendments during the application process.

Council staff also held a moderation meeting at council's administration building, plus a meeting at one of the resident's houses to discuss this proposal.

Additionally, Cr Green has responded to emails from several residents of Mimosa Street.
