

Take a bow, park staff

Not so long ago, I contacted Rockdale Council complaining about the condition of the ponds in Bicentennial Park.

They were so badly encroached with what is known as alligator weeds that the wildlife had nowhere to swim.

Fortunately, that is a thing of the past. It is now back to the pristine condition it was before.

Congratulations must go to the manager of parks and gardens, John Commerford, and his staff.

It is a credit to them.

Thank you for our daughter

Recently, our eight-year-old daughter became lost from our party of friends and family.

We were frantically looking for her.

In the meantime, Gary Green and his friend were passing in his car by the place where my daughter was sitting, crying and waiting for our return.

While many folks passed by, Gary stopped and assisted my child.

He called the police and waited for a significant time for the police to arrive, and all the time comforting my child.

The police returned our daughter to us.

It was a considerate and kind action by Gary and friend.

Weeds are a wearisome worry

The vacant land and footpath opposite my house loves growing weeds, which spread their seeds all around.

At 92 years of age, I spend many days pulling
